What Are Toric Lenses?

Toric lenses are a new kind of lens They are ground with extremely deep curves, thus enabling the glasses to at right angles to their surfaces.

These lenses are becoming very popular with the best class of trade. Why don't you wear Torics? We would be giad to fit you out with a pair.

Attorney Hull also read resolutions on the death of Attorney W. F. M. Rogers in New London in 1988, and those who spoke regarding him were Attorneys Freeman and Geary. He served in the Spanish-American war and had been judge of probate.

A memorial on the death of Frank Thurston Brown which occurred April Thurston Brown, which occurred April 17, 1909, aged 55, was read by Attorney C. W. Comstock, while Attorneys W. S. Allis and H. A. Hull spoke upon the life and character of the deceased, Mr.

Allis said: Eulogy by Mr. Allis.

A considerable number of the men A considerable number of the members of this bar came into active practice from 15 to 20 years later than Mr. Brown. It is in expression of the sentiments of such of our members perhaps now the majority, that I wish to say a word to these resolutions. My personal relations with Mr. Brown were somewhat closer than the ordinject of much debate today by returning the subject of the subject of much debate today by returning the subject of the subject of the subject of much debate today by returning the subject of the s y. The similarity of our experiences ing Yale men. It is stated that one early life—boyhood on the farm, member of the eight fainted when the country school, preparation for college in the same academy, the return to it as instructors after graduation at the same college, the office study of law in Norwich while leacning—are per-heps explanatory of these relations, and justify me in speaking at this

When we came to this har we found Mr. Brown actively engaged in practice. Even then he was regarded as a leader. To some of us he perhaps seemed at times over zealous in the interests of his clients, but he was never inconsiderate of the young practitioned because of his inexperience. Positive in his convictions, he was frank and fearless in his expression of them. In the later years of his practice he became more and more tolerant of the opinions and positions of those who were opposed to him. In the later years of his practice he became more and more tolerant of the opinions and positions of those who were opposed to him. In fact, a desire for fairness and a wish to state clearly the position of his opponent became with him prominent characteristics.

It is not necessary at this time to speak of the training which so well fitted Mr. Brown for his chosen profession, nor of the distinguished ancestors from whom he inherited some of those who were opposed to him. In dered him particularly adapted for it.

of those who were opposed to him. In dered him particularly adapted for it. Neither is it necessary to recount here the many distinguished position which he held in public affairs. July Str. for girls one of the recognized leaders of the prime of life and in the full memory of his orbillant and intellectual equipment seemed doubly sad from the fact. and the Cornell rowing leaders have disagreed, and once or twice he has restgned, only to return under his ment seemed doubly sad from the fact that when taken away he was appar-ently just entering upon greater achievements for which his earlier work had been but a preparation. own conditions.

It is understood that Courtney is under contract with Cornell for a period of years, in which case Courtney may find it hard to get away from that work had been but a preparation.

It was perhaps as an advocate that Mr. Brown excelled. Once persuaded that his contention was right he was most tenacious in maintaining it. He delighted in the legal battle. His place was in command and at the front. Quoting his own words as applied to another: "He never acknowledged defeat until his last resource was exhausted." He had little taste for the details and drudgery of preparation. Unfortunately for him and us he could not easily avail himself of the assistance of others less brilliant and masterful than himself. He possessed a most remarkable power of grasping the, vital issues of a case and of clearly and concisely stating them. I ing the vital issues of a case and of clearly and concisely stating them. I am sure it is the opinion of every one who has ever been associated with Mr. Brown, either in office or court work that he has seldom met a man of keener quicker intellect. Indeed, perhaps this very capacity sometimes worked to his disadvantage.

His manner of address to the court r jury was not oratorical, but his or jury was not oratorical, but his words were always forceful and commanded attention. He spoke for results and not applause. In his private life Mr. Brown was unassuming, but possessed a kind and sympathetic disposition. He disliked ostentation and detested sham. To his friends he was loyal, but they must prove themselves worthy. He was a man of pronounced personality.

Although a year has passed since his death, how real seems his presence in this room—the quick, energetic step, the jovial manner, the clear and positive opinion so readily expressed—how hard it is to realize that he is not still with us and of us!

Of strict integrity Frank T. Brown held the confidence of his fellowmen. In his death the profession which he loved and the state which he served suffered a profound loss. His memory will ever be an inspiration to his associates.

Words by Judge Shumway,

Judge Shumway ordered all the res-olutions spread on record and he spoke a few words regarding Mr. Brown and curves, thus enabling the glasses to set very near the eye without the discomfort of having the eyelashes brush them.

The Toric lenses shut out all back light, so you get no reflection of objects behind you.

The field of vision is greatly increased by the use of Toric because you always look through the biasses at right angles to their surfaces.

Business of the Court.

Swallow Easily Outdistances Companions in Flight Between Compiegne and Antwerp.

A citizen of Antwerp has put to test the celerity and homing instinct of the swallow as compared with pigeons, a London correspondent of the New York Sun says. He caught a swallow in its nest under his roof at Antwerp, made a red mark on its feathers and sent the bird with a consignment of 250 carrier pigeons by train to Compiegne, in northern France, a distance of 147 miles. The birds were released there sim-

The pigeons circled laboriously around before deciding which direction they should take The swallow reached its nest in Antwerp in 67 minutes, while the pigeons took four hours and seven minutes to cover the distance. In other words, the messenger of spring flew at the rate of nearly 132 miles an hour, while the speed of the pigeons only slightly exceeded 35% miles an

It is stated by Yale men that at one time during the latter part of the race Coach Kennedy was at the point of stopping the Yale crew as the man who had fainted had turned ghastly white, the pallor extanding all over his body. As the man continued to pull his oar the shell sped on. Up till the two and a half miles the crew had been fighting it out superbly, but the Blue slowly fell behind through lack of power, due in no small part, it is thought, to the loss of effectiveness of the unconscious man.
